IRVINE, Calif. – UC Irvine’s University Art Galleries (UAG) will present the first survey of one of the most iconic figures of the Chicano art movement, Gilbert “Magu” Luján (1940–2011), and an accompanying publication. Aztlán to Magulandía: The Journey of Chicano Artist Gilbert “Magu” Luján is part of Pacific Standard Time: LA/LA, a far-reaching and ambitious exploration of Latin American and Latino art in dialogue with Los Angeles, taking place from September 2017 through January 2018 at more than 70 cultural institutions across Southern California. Pacific Standard Time is an initiative of the Getty. The presenting sponsor is Bank of America. Major support for Aztlán to Magulandía is provided through grants from the Getty Foundation.

One of the founding members of the Chicano artists collective Los Four, Luján is known for his coloration and visual explorations of Chicano culture and community that drew upon and brought to life various historic and contemporary visual sources with startling results: Pyramid-mounted low riders driven by anthropomorphic dogs traversing a newly defined and mythologized L.A. He was part of a small group of dedicated artists and intellectuals who set about defining a Chicano identity and culture as part of the Civil Rights movement of the 1960s. The UAG’s retrospective will focus on creativity and invention in Luján’s work in a myriad of sketches and drawings, paintings, and sculptures. Luján combined two world-making concepts, Aztlán, the mythic northern ancestral home of the indigenous Mexican Aztecs that became a charged symbol of Chicano activism; and Magulandia, the term Luján coined for the space in which he lived and produced his work, and for his work as a whole. Together, Aztlán and Magulandia represented both physical spaces and the complex cultural, geographic, and conceptual relationships that exist between Los Angeles and Mexico and served as dual landscapes for Luján’s artistic philosophy and cultural creativity.

About the Artist and Curators

About Gilbert “Magu” Luján:
As part of a small group of dedicated artists and intellectuals, Luján set about defining Chicano identity and culture on the heels of the Civil Rights era of the 1960s. To do so, he combined various historic and contemporary visual sources with startling results: pyramid-mounted lowriders driven by human-like dogs traversing a newly defined and mythologized LA. Luján’s wealth of imagery merges the traditions of art brut and folk art; Meso-American mythology and ritual; the Chicano culture of lowriders, murals, and graffiti; the religious imagery of New World Catholicism; and the political and sociological imperatives of socialism—all along with a savvy self-awareness of contemporary American art since World War II. He produced ambitious public art projects such as the Hollywood & Vine Metro station, and exhibited extensively in galleries and museums within the United States and abroad.

Luján’s efforts as an emerging artist and student in the masters program at the University of California, Irvine, in the 1960s and the early 1970s changed the course of art history. Famously, at that time, he brought together Los Four—an artists’ collective comprised of himself, Carlos Almaraz, Frank Romero, and Beto de la Rocha. Los Four breached the sober, Eurocentric walls of academia and the Los Angeles County Museum of Art with the exuberant artistic energy that had been gathering on the streets—and particularly the walls—of East Los Angeles. A fervent, dedicated theorist and organizer, Magu was soon recognized as the fulcrum for burgeoning chicanismo, tirelessly promoting an alternative view to the dominant Western aesthetic and reinvigorating it with both a renewed social conscience and Latin passion.

Luján also made a significant contribution as a teacher, in ways both formal and informal. From 1976 to 1980, he served on the faculty of the La Raza Studies Department at Fresno City College, concluding his term as department chair. In Pomona, he was active in community outreach at the Pomona Art Colony, and also taught art at the nearby Claremont Colleges. A loquacious promoter of the passionate discussion of aesthetics and politics, Magu’s famous "Mental Menudos" attracted artists and writers from throughout the Southland.

Published University Art Galleries, University of California, Irvine in association with DelMonico Books

This is the first monograph to feature the work of Gilbert “Magu” Luján (1940–2011), a renowned California-born contemporary artist who was a spokesperson of Chicano art practice, theory, and multicultural debates from their inception to now. The work of this important sculptor, spokesperson, and teacher is seen from a variety of cultural perspectives, drawing on the artist’s entire oeuvre, and placing well-known works alongside unpublished drawings, paintings, sculptures, notebooks, and statements. Designed in a large format to complement Magu’s bold use of color, the book includes essays addressing such topics as the concept of emplacement, gender and the imagery of lowriders, and Magu as a social artist.

The book accompanies a retrospective exhibition at UC Irvine’s University Art Galleries (UAG), the first survey of this most iconic and influential artist of the Chicano art movement. Major support for the publication and exhibition is provided through grants from the Getty Foundation. The UAG’s
A retrospective will present Luján’s creativity and inventiveness by focusing on the many themes undertaken by the artist, as they appear in sketches, drawings, paintings, and sculptures. The exhibition is part of the Getty’s Pacific Standard Time, a far-reaching and ambitious exploration of Latin American and Latino art in dialogue with Los Angeles.

While previous publications have interpreted the works of Chicano artists by emphasizing visual connections to a Mexican past, Aztlán to Magulandia uniquely acknowledges (and extends) the parameters of Magu’s visual conversations with national and international contemporary art during the second half of the twentieth century. Pictorially, the catalog achieves this by presenting well-known works alongside unpublished drawings, paintings, and sculptures. This is the first publication to draw from Luján’s entire output and activities, including rare works and archival sources which have only recently come to light with the recent reorganization of the artist’s extensive archive by his family.

Aztlán to Magulandia: The Journey of Chicano Artist Gilbert “Magu” Luján will be published shortly before the UAG exhibition opening. This event will represent a poignant homecoming for Luján’s works, as the gallery hosted the first major exhibition of Los Four in 1973.

Hal Glicksman is an independent curator based in Ymeray, France and Santa Monica, California.

Constance Cortez is Associate Professor of Art History at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas.

About the UAG
The University Art Galleries are committed to promoting an inter-generational dialogue between 60s/70s neo-avant-garde art and contemporary visual culture. Accordingly, the curatorial mission is to keep an eye on the modernist past while promoting the most innovative aesthetic and political debates of the post-modern present. From this vantage, the projects commissioned provoke intelligent debate on the subject of art in its most expansive poetic definition. What distinguishes the program is its unwavering commitment to publishing scholarly texts in catalogue/book form in order to disseminate research-based information into the community, providing a venue for the promotion of innovative discourse surrounding mixed media production today. The UAG program provides several exhibition platforms for inter-generational and interdisciplinary dialogue. The Major Works of Art Series commissions original projects by canonical artists working today. The Emerging Artist Series features solo projects by a set of younger artists informed by the legacies showcased in the Major Works series. The Critical Aesthetics Program commissions new work by internationally renowned mid-career artists. Augmenting this inter-generational dialogue, UAG also produces larger thematic group exhibitions alternately showcasing historical and contemporary art and film projects. UAG further promotes an active dialogue between UCI residents and the local and international art communities through colloquia, conferences, visiting artist lectures and theme-based films series, all of which are open to the public. As the galleries continue to mature, they stand committed to being an experimental exhibition space different from the current - but largely traditional - art biennial and film festival platforms.
