193/287 Special Topics: Dance for Camera

This new course explores the choreographic and cinematic aspects of dance for camera resulting in the production of a screendance. Through collaborative processes students engage with different disciplines, combine media production skills and develop student choreography. This elective course is open to all levels in CTSA and across the campus. Learning outcomes are to create storyboards outlining narrative or abstract plot, distinguish, demonstrate and apply filming angles in film work, experiment / improvise with dancers in choreography, develop content, integrating climax, music choice, and justify choices. Instructors: Aly Rose, Visiting Scholar, NYU Shanghai and Professor Lisa Naugle, Dance Department

Best wishes,
